How well you do in anything: But off a wild overhand into Tai Otoshi?

Then again you usually don't get to pick out the where or when of your street fight. Maybe this was unintentional, but it's dishonest to assert something you actually do not know for certain and then later back away from it as an "educated guess. And the most functional ways are to obey the edicts of sports science and competitive training paradigms with real performance metrics and de-emphasize the culturally inspired aesthetics - like forms, and chi, and all. Its fighting system is quite deep. Hell, I love to travel but has a awful lot of the world still to see. The only person I've seen actually talk realistically about the problems with blocking is Tony Blauer. So I don't really think I would necessarily ascribe to some of the ideas they got going. I don't care to because I'm fine with what I.
